THANK YOU!

$1.1 Million Awarded to the Iowa Seed Association Corn Cover Crops Initiative

The Iowa Seed Association (ISA) was recently granted $1.1M from the Iowa Department of Agriculture & Land Stewardship (IDALS) for the “Iowa Seed Corn Cover Crops Initiative”. ISA is the project lead, and partnered with the Agribusiness Association of Iowa, Soil & Water Conservation Society, Iowa Corn, and Iowa Farm Bureau Federation on the project proposal.

The funding award from IDALS was made as part of their Water Quality Initiative (WQI) program for practice demonstration projects. WQI focuses on demonstration projects that complement and enhance existing efforts of the Iowa Nutrient Reduction Strategy (NRS) and provide concentrated efforts to both demonstrate conservation practices and provide outreach and education to disseminate information and promote increased awareness and adoption of available practices and technologies for reducing nutrient losses.

The “Iowa Seed Corn Cover Crops Initiative” will focus on the seed corn production system in Iowa and work to provide financial, technical, and informational assistance to help increase adoption of cover crops within this system. The focus on seed corn production is largely driven by the unique opportunity for adoption of cover crops that seed corn provides due to having an earlier harvest which provides better timing opportunities for establishing cover crops in the fall after harvest. This focus is also heavily driven by the seed industry in Iowa, and their efforts to help promote and support the use of cover crops as evidenced by ISA’s “Cover Crops Challenge” issued in the summer of 2015 to all seed production companies in Iowa. This project will help to begin implementing that challenge by providing valuable resources for seed companies and their growers.

The primary objectives of this project are to continue to increase the number and engagement level of seed companies that are working with their producers to assist them with adopting cover crops, increase the number and percentage of seed corn growers that are utilizing cover crops, develop new strategic partnerships across the agribusiness industry to assist with providing turn-key services to assist with cover crop implementation, and develop educational and informational materials primarily targeted to entry-level cover crop users to provide more focus on beginning user needs.

Educational and informational efforts and outcomes are expected (and intended) to have broader impacts beyond just the seed corn production system. Seed corn production has historically been a cropping system utilized to test and develop new technologies and crop recommendations that lead to broader adoption and incorporation into larger acreages devoted to grain production. The focus of this project to seed corn production has great potential to influence and facilitate adoption of cover crops in a similar fashion, starting with seed corn acres and leading to increased adoption on acres devoted to grain production as well.

An overview of the “Iowa Seed Corn Cover Crops Initiative” will be presented by Shawn Richmond, AAI Director of Environmental Technology, during the Seed Forum at the 2016 Agribusiness Showcase & Conference so we hope to see you there.
